Fun site

Flub Titles

Best in bad foreign language subtitles.

Net life

Job sites

Employment sites go after blue-collar workers.

Senior help

Site launched to help seniors find drug programs.

Fighting spam

Researchers battle e-mail stealing Web bots.

Web messaging

Technology breaks barriers, dissolves distance.

e-Policy

Hot Sites

Grocery History

Supermarkets today might be places you avoid if at all possible, but the Safeways and A&Ps of yesteryear can get some people waxing nostalgic. Groceteria.net celebrates food vendors from the '20s on, celebrating the joys of returnable soda bottles, and the birth of the modern supermarket chain.

Travel Itineraries

Discover our shared past the next time you travel. These online itineraries, courtesy of the National Register of Historic Places, offer guided tours of some of the most historically significant sites in the country. Choose an individual location or explore itinerary collections that deal with the civil rights movement and women's history.

E-Texts

Have a need to know? Bibliomania gives you easy access to more than 2,000 texts, including articles, interviews, and a wide variety of classic novels, short stories and plays, all for free. Also includes study guides, biographies, reference works and more.

Game Ads

Web Celebs

Viggo Mortensen

Rings star takes cyberspace crown, too.

vote for your favorite bits of hilarious hucksterism at AdBowl.com? A highly democratic Web event guaranteed to forge solidarity between the football widows (and dare we say widowers) of the land.

Willie & Joe

Cartoonist Bill Mauldin, who died this week at the age of 81, may be best remembered for the creation of Willie and Joe. The pair of just-plain-folks GIs appeared in Stars and Stripes, sympathetically portraying daily life on the battlefields of WWII. This small collection of comic panels reminds us of the talent we've lost.
